The National Graduate Recruitment Conference 2008

The Grove Hotel, Hertfordshire Friday 19th September 2008

High Fliers Research is delighted to present its second national conference exclusively for graduate recruiters. With no suppliers, no agencies and no sponsors, this one-day event provides a unique forum for the UK's leading employers to discuss and debate the latest developments in graduate recruitment.

Timed to take place just before the start of the new university recruiting season, the conference programme provides in-depth analysis of the graduate recruitment round in 2007-2008, an exclusive preview of the graduate vacancies and starting salaries on offer from Britain's top employers in 2009, plus the chance to meet student job hunters from the 'Class of 2009'.

The conference also features a choice of 'insight' sessions, giving first-hand accounts of graduate recruitment at some of the country's best-known employers. Hosts include Rhonda Carter, Head of Marketing & Diversity at the Civil Service Fast Stream; Zoë Gordon, Graduate Recruitment Manager at Allen & Overy; Brian Hood, European Graduate Recruitment Manager at Citi; and Alex Snelling, Recruitment Director at L'Oréal.

The venue for the conference is The Grove, a contemporary five-star hotel set in over 300 acres of parkland, just 30 minutes from central London. Often described as London's country estate, The Grove provides a convenient and prestigious setting for The National Graduate Recruitment Conference 2008.

The delegate rate for the conference is £395+VAT (reduced to £295+VAT for bookings made by 4th July 2008) and includes a three-course lunch in The Grove's Glasshouse Restaurant plus all conference materials.

So, make a date to join Britain's top recruiters this September, confirm your place by emailing amy.stanton@highfliers.co.uk
